

EMBROIDERIES AMONG EXHIBITS AT BANQUET

Needle Work of Philippine Women Essentially a Home Industry.

TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

Firms Have Been Asked to Send Products for Display Journalism Week.

Philippine embroideries will be among the exhibits brought to Columbia in connection with the Made-in-the-Philippines banquet. Hand embroideries are regarded as the daintiest product of the Filipino woman's home industry. Thousands of dollars worth of these articles are imported annually into the United States.

The demand for Philippine hand embroideries in this country, China and Japan has led to the establishment of embroidery factories in the Philippines. The greater bulk of business of these factories at present consists in collecting the embroidered article and in shipping them to their agents in the foreign countries. There is little embroidery done in the factory, as it is essentially a home industry and the Filipino women prefer working in their homes. This accounts for the artistic quality of the work and the originality and the great variety of designs of the Philippine embroideries.

Hand embroideries are taught in the public schools in the Philippines. The bureau of education of the Philippine government holds exhibits of the work of the school girls every year. The Filipino girls are dexterous in the use of their needles and their capacity for doing fine and exquisite work has been the source of admiration of travelers who have visited the Philippines.

Jose E. Sanvictores, commissioned by the Philippine government to take charge of the collection of the exhibits for the Made-in-the-Philippines banquet, has requested all embroidery firms in the Philippines to send in their products. A great many of the embroideries brought here will be disposed of at the banquet.

Amateur Play at C. H. S.

A play entitled "The Sleeping Car" will be presented by the Thelma Guild of Columbia High School at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the school study hall. A small admission will be charged, the proceeds to be spent for curtains for the school stage.

CHECKER FORCES ARE MARSHALED FOR FRAY

"Click, click" followed after an interval by a louder "click" means that over in the strong room of the sheriff's office one of the players in the annual winter checker tournament has executed a triple jump and landed bang into the king row.

Sometimes the clicks are followed by the cackling of graybeards whose punctilious cursing in times of stress is strangely like a trooper's—one of Morgan's.

If it is the middle-aged blond man with the florid face and hands and sunny disposition, who has done the trick the softly-whistled air of a war-song of '17-'19 is his hymn of victory. Perhaps, while he was planning the foray through the lines of enemy checkers, he whistled "There's a Long, Long Trail" or "Till the Boys Come Home." But when this abundantly healthy blond man in an army shirt and stockman's boots jumps off one or two or three of his opponent's pieces the tune he whistles is always "Joan of Arc."

Save for the low whistle, the thrumming of a player's fingernails on the table-top or the whirring swish and "lump" as one of the checker-fan tucks up his beard and spits, an intent silence hangs in the room throughout the long February afternoons. The winter sunlight seeping through the soiled windows silvers the dust on the stacks of records of past arrests, convictions and acquittais in Boone County. It warms the curved backs of the watchers of the tournament, while the steam-radiator nearby coaxes them into believing that the sunlight is the sunshine of spring.

Draymen, lawyers, politicians, loafers, old men who munch tobacco for hours on end—all these come in and stay awhile. But the game is older and stronger than they and they seldom see either the beginning or end of the day's play. As they go out, the click click of the jumping checkers, the cackling of the skinny old man who swears like one of Morgan's Raiders and the softly whistled war-song follow him from the room, to be lost in the big silence of the lobby of the courthouse.

SAYS IT'S AGAINST STRIKES

Teachers' Union Sends Out Circular Letter on Subject.

In a circular letter sent to all members of the University faculty below the rank of dean, the University of Missouri Union No. 126, American Federation of Teachers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, denies that it is the policy of the federation, both local and national, to resort to a strike of teachers. The letter states: "There is no doubt whatever that the policy of the federation, both local and national, is definitely and finally against any strike by teachers."

The letter contains a letter from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, regarding the status of the union and the relations of the Federation of Labor and the Federation of Teachers.
